

Lorris Betz, M.D., Ph.D., is Senior Vice President for Health Sciences and CEO of the University of Utah Health System. His responsibilities include all health-related organizations on campus, including University Hospital, the Huntsman Cancer Institute and the Colleges of Medicine, Health, Nursing and Pharmacy.

Dr. Betz earned his bachelor's and medical degrees as well as a Ph.D. in biochemistry and physiology from the University of Wisconsin. He completed his pediatric residency and a research fellowship in pediatric neurology at the University of California San Francisco, and joined the University of Michigan medical school faculty in 1979.

In 1999 Dr. Betz moved to Utah where he has provided leadership and planning for our ever-expanding medical campus, hospitals, clinics and institutes. It was under his watch that the legislature allocated funds for our wonderful Health Sciences Education Building. Additional funds raised by his Development Office helped furnish and equip the facility.
